

74. SECURITY: TO GELLIUS

ellius [p. 212] had heard his uncle used to rebuke, anyone who performed or spoke about love's delights.

To avoid this misfortune himself, he seduced his uncle's wife, and made his uncle a silent Harpocrates [p. 213].
What he wanted, he did: for, now though he buggered
his uncle himself, his uncle would not say a word.

'Harpocrates'
Jan Harmensz Muller (Beligan, 1571 - 1628)
The Rijksmuseum