

110. NO CHEATING: TO AUFILENA

ufilena [p. 201], just mistresses are always praised:
they accept their reward, for what they agree to.
You, who promised, dishonestly hostile, to me,

who don't give but just take, you do wrong.

To carry it through would be fine, Aufilena, not to promise is chaste: but to snatch at what's given in fraudulent service, is worse than the greediest whore who offers herself with her whole body.
